California Cow Makes High Butterfat Record

(Special Correspondence)

Chicago, Jan. 2.—Nine California Holstein cows now hold production record of over 1000 pounds butterfat in one year. The latest of these to add to the state's rapidly growing dairy fame is Aralia De Kol Mead 2d, who recently completed a 365-day test period with a record of 26,938.5 pounds milk containing 1043.07 pounds butterfat—equivalent to 1303.83 pounds butter. She made this record on the farm of her life-long owners, A. W. Morris & Sons Corporation, at Woodland. Late figures show that there are now 75 cows of all breeds with 1000-pound yearly butterfat records. Aralia is seven years old, weighs 1700 pounds and is one of twins.

During eight months of her test period Aralia was permitted to run at pasture with the other cows of the herd and was milked regularly four times a day. Her grain ration consisted of ground barley, oats, bran and linseed oil meal, which was fed throughout the year in amounts of 12 to 20 pounds daily, according to her production and appetite. This was supplemented by roots and corn ensilage during two-thirds of the period with all the other cows of the herd.

Auto Licenses May Be Secured January Fifteenth

The State Motor Vehicle Department will open at 1426 Harrison street, Oakland, January 15, where licenses can be secured and plates received. The license plates will have white figures on a black background, separated in the center by small letters designating the state. After February 1, 1923, the owner becomes delinquent and is subject to the law.

Help the Mail Carriers

If you want your mail delivered you must install a convenient box or receptacle. Uncle Sam has issued an order soon to be put into effect, that carriers will not be required to deliver mail where there is no slot or approved receptacle at the front door.

When the Elks complete their basement banquet room, it will be the smallest of all places in Richmond to hold get-together dinners.

Season's Rainfall

December has been an unusually wet month, notwithstanding the Wright act is in full force and effect.

The total rainfall for December was 8.15, and for the season a fraction over 16 inches.

The abundance of moisture insures bumper crops for California, and guarantees an adequate water supply for the entire bay region.

U. C. Improvements

The campus of the university was improved to the extent of $1,500,000 during the year 1922. This does not include the million dollar stadium which is followed out at the hills in Strawberry Canyon.

Have it printed at The Terminal, the oldest newspaper in Richmond.

Woman Attorney to Be Member of Board of Control

Los Angeles, Jan. 5.—It is authoritatively announced here that Attorney Mrs. Nellie Pierce will be a member of the state board of control, Governor Richardson selecting her on account of her qualifications. She has been employed by Richardson on the new budget. Mrs. Pierce is from Hermosa, a beach resort near Redonda.

Ellen Cornish, 14, to Enter U.C.

Berkeley, Jan. 5.—Ellen Cornish, aged 14, will be the youngest of her sex to enter college in the University of California. She will enroll with the spring semester this month. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank V. Cornish of Berkeley, the former recently city attorney of Berkeley. The mother is a graduate of the university and a former teacher. Miss Ellen did not enter school until she reached the age of 11. This no doubt accounts for her wonderful advancement and final graduation from the high school last week.

Ex-President Wilson, 66

Washington, Dec. 31.—Former President Wilson celebrated his 66th birthday last Thursday, the U. S. senate passing a resolution expressing the pleasure and joy of hearing the news of his recovery to health. Wilson received hundreds of telegrams, congratulatory letters and birthday gifts.

Banner Year For Contra Costa County

Martinez, Jan. 5.—County Recorder Michael Hurley reports 10,043 instruments filed in his office during the year 1922, and fees collected $14,038.75.

Bud Murphy of Richmond spent Christmas at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Fletcher.—Cloverdale Reveille.

INSURING PEACE

"Know anything about music?"
"No."
"Got any views about the new development in art?"
"Not any."
"Think you could settle the League of Nations problem?"
"Do not."
"Believe you can pick the next Presidential candidate?"
"I don't."

"Know the true inwardness of the drama?"
"Know nothing about it."
"Fine. Come over to my house some evening, bring your oldest pipe, and we'll have a pleasant time."
Philadelphia Public Ledger.

INCREASES TONE

To increase the tone of all kinds of stringed musical instruments, a bridge has been invented in England, and is now being sold in this country, that in appearance is much the same as any other bridge, but that has in each foot of the bridge a sound chamber, says an illustrated article in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Christmas trees when left standing and become dry, are a menace to the household. When ignited, they burn like tinder, and start fires often impossible to control.

Big San Pablo Dam Is Reaching High Water Mark

Oakland Jan. 5.—The generous rains of December and the first week of January have guaranteed an immense water supply for the eastbay cities. It is stated by the water people. There is no fear of a shortage for 1923 or 1924, as it is said there is an adequate supply for at least three years.

San Pablo dam reservoir is rapidly filling, and the high water mark will soon be reached if Mr. Pluvius continues to contribute as generously as he has the past month.

The water problem will not dawn, however, and the Hetch Hetchy pro rata supply for the eastbay cities must soon be adjusted, say those in touch with the situation.

More Land For School Sites Purchased

Nineteen acres of land will be purchased by the high school board for a new athletic field for the high school. The land is near the knitting works, known as the Dooling tract.

Three Hooch Joints Raided

Three places were raided yesterday afternoon by the local police. Antonio Baznik, Grand Canyon park; Frank Masson, 14th S. 43d street, and A. Giovanni, Point Richmond, were the men arrested with the goods on each "victim."

Rogers Elected

E. W. Rogers was elected president of the labor council Wednesday night. C. R. Beatty was re-appointed business agent.

Dental Society Elect

At a meeting of the Contra Costa county dental society Saturday, Dr. H. I. Horner was elected president. Drs. B. W. O'Brien, C. H. Henderson, and E. M. Horner were elected board of censors. The annual banquet will be held at Hotel Oakland January 27.

Wedding Bells Ring For Telephone Belle

Miss Edith Hillier, local telephone operator, was married to Hartford Johnson of the California Ink works, Albany, Friday. Both bride and groom are favorably known in the eastbay cities, and are receiving congratulations from their many friends.

TAKES MAN TO DRESS WOMAN

Paul Poliet, celebrated dress designer of Paris, says that only a man knows how to dress a woman. The art of dressing woman is as complex as woman herself. A woman must be dressed according to her type. Generalization is the failure of elegance. It's a man's job to be undertaken only after the matter has been given a great deal of study.

DIVORCES IN SAVARIA

The "marrying epidemic" in Bavaria which followed the end of the war has been succeeded by a "divorce epidemic," according to data given out by the state statistical bureau there. In 1921 there were 3,308 divorces, compared with 1,266 in 1914.

Barbers Elect

At a meeting of the barbers' union Tuesday night officers for 1923 were elected, after which a banquet was held.

Mount Diablo Should Be the People's Park

Californians who have at heart the movement for the presentation of this state's resources and beauties to the world will consider the proposal to complete the state park at Mt. Diablo an opportunity of unusual promise. Diablo is an asset to the state. Not only does it offer an eminence from which the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys, the ridges of foothills, and even the ocean, may be seen, but it has on its sides an immense acreage of natural park land.

The movement to make a playground of Mt. Diablo, to preserve its beauties for the state and the future, has not been started too soon. The state has acted toward the acquisition of the 4000 acres on Diablo by authorizing the Mount Diablo Park Commission to arrange the purchase. What is needed is support of the plan in the coming session of the legislature.

At the rate the eastbay section and Contra Costa county are growing, Mt. Diablo some day will be in the center of a densely populated district. The recreation spots within easy reach of the cities will become fewer with the years and as they become scarce so will they be acquired by private interests. Diablo should belong to the state. It should be a park, now and for always.—Oakland Tribune.

DEvised BY ROMAN GENERAL

Fabius Maximus First to Apply Wearing-Out Tactic as Part of Art of Warfare.

The policy of wearing out the enemy in war by delays, misleading movements, feints of attack, etc., while avoiding open battle, is called the "Fabian policy," from the following circumstance.

Fabius Maximus was a Roman general in the second Punic war. Having been appointed just after the Roman army had suffered severe defeat at Lake Thrasymene, he perceived that his disheartened troops and bands of raw recruits could not oppose successfully a trained army flushed with victory and led by their great commander, Hannibal.

Maximus therefore avoided pitched battle, moved his camp from highland to highland, and fired out the enemy with marches and counter-marches. This he continued until thwarted in his calculations by the impatience of the Roman senate.

MORE DREADED THAN SHARK

Larger Species of Devilfish the Most Formidable Inhabitants of the Ocean.

The larger species of devilfish are undoubtedly the most formidable inhabitants of the sea, not excepting the sharks, and as they are often swimmers in the middle depths of the ocean they are rarely seen by man, and are for the most part known by pieces of enormous arms, generally seen floating on the surface when a cachalot is harpooned, and by a few stray fragments cast up on the shore. There are, however, a few cases in which a whole animal has been captured.

Two fishermen in Plumpers pass, which is located about half way between Vancouver and Victoria, B. C., were almost capsize a few years ago by a giant octopus, or squid, which reached over the side of the boat with a huge tentacle, fastening onto one of the seats within a few inches of one of the fishermen. The creature then threw all its weight downward and an upset was avoided only by the quickness of one of the men in seizing an oar and severing the tentacle, which remained attached to the seat while the octopus vanished in a pool of black fluid.

It was in THE TERMINAL.

Secretary Davis Would Have Strict Check On Aliens

Washington, Jan. 4.—Secretary of Labor Davis, who recently made an extended tour of the country, and especially of California, recommends that an annual census be taken of the foreign born as a most desirable feature for an improved immigrant policy in handling the alien problem.

The government has been lax in admitting certain types of immigrants, causing no end of annoyance and trouble, which can be directly attributed to neglect in checking up to see what the aliens are doing, where they are located and how they are living.

Nearly all foreign countries require aliens to give an accurate account of themselves. Especially is this true of Japan, where it is said an American cannot acquire land or become a citizen, although assimilation is not desirable by Americans with the yellow natives.

However, lenient Uncle Sam has an over-supply of the bench-legged orientals who are actively engaged in acquiring the cream of the country's garden spot—the Golden West.

He Would Seek Solace in Beer

Among the thousands (more or less) of Christmas and New Year's greeting cards received at this office, the following lament would be more befitting "bock beer day," or set to the music, "Them Days Is Gone Forever."

The holidays are here—
The saddest of the year,
And if I only had my way
I'd drink a keg of beer.
But why in "dog" tell troubles old?
"Tis they-there there nor here,
For we can only drink in rhyme
A phantom glass of beer."
—R. Otten.

A New Recipe For Making Hooch

(By Stew Souseberry)

Chase a bullfrog three miles and gather up the hops; to the hops add the following: 10 gallons of tanbark, half-pint of shellac, 1 bar of homemade soap; boil mixture 36 hours, then strain through an L. W. W. sock to keep from working; bottle and add one grasshopper to each pint to give it a kick.

A BEAUTY
"Party outside sitting a patent pie knife."
"I'm not interested."
"You will be when you see the girl."

BRITAIN'S SMOKE NUISANCE

England has its smoke nuisance just the same as American cities had until Yankee ingenuity solved the problem by inventing smoke-consuming devices. The other day Lord Newton addressed the house of lords, trying to convince them that it was imperative that something be done to lessen the soot nuisance, saying that in the city of Manchester alone $250,000 is annually added to the people's laundry bill by the use of soft coal and that England and Scotland are the dirtiest countries of Europe.

Quoting statistics, Lord Newton said that 900 tons of soot fall every year on each square mile of London, enough to build a pyramid four times as high as the clock tower of the houses of parliament.

Government Will Bar Undesirables

Trains Are Loaded to the Limit With Tourists

Tourists are arriving in Central California by thousands, say the trainmen of the various lines terminating at the moles on this side of the bay. All the Pacific Coast states are entertaining thousands of tourists this winter.

Greatly improved conditions all over the country, bumper crops in the middle west and reduced tourist fares are responsible for the crowded condition of the trains coming across the continent to the Golden West.

It is estimated by reliable traffic authorities that over a quarter of a million tourists came into California over one line of railway, almost twice the number of any previous year.

With people coming to the Coast in such large numbers accounts for the great prosperity we are enjoying in California. Every effort should be made to entertain the tourist, who may become a permanent resident here, if he is given that Southern California "glad hand," and made to feel at home and that he is not among strangers.

LONG HELD BY ONE FAMILY

For Ninety Years a Member of the House of Sprague Has Been Consul of Gibraltar.

For many years three members of a single family have represented the United States at the port of Gibraltar. President Jackson made Horatio Sprague consul in 1833, his son of the same name served from 1849 to 1901, when the son of the second Horatio, Richard L. Sprague, became consul and still holds that office. Horatio Sprague settled in Gibraltar during the War of 1813 and there engaged in business. After the opening of the Suez canal in 1867 the commercial importance of Gibraltar greatly increased, as all trade between the northern and western maritime countries of Europe, North America and the West Indies passed through the strait, with Gibraltar as the first port of entry and the last of departure. It was fitting that the American ambassador at Madrid, the British governor of the colony and other officials, civil and naval, should celebrate the anniversary of the termination of the ninth decade of the consulship of the Spragues. We hope the present incumbent of the office rounds out the full century of family service.—Boston Herald.

ESSENTIALLY MASCULINE

Gordon was visiting his aunt in the village, and was not acquainted with the children. At first he amused himself with Verona, some years younger, but when he met an older girl who possessed a velocipede he abandoned Verona regardless of her attempts to interest him with her little wagon.

"What's the reason you never play with Verona, now?" his aunt inquired. "Isn't she a nice little girl?"
"O, yes, Aunt Emma," explained Gordon. "Verona's all right, but a fellow wants a change, you know."

PATHOS IN HIS DEATH

It was rather a strange thing that Epos A. Mills, nature lover and author of books about the wild life, fauna and flora, of the Rockies, where he experienced many and often perilous adventures, should have come to his death from the perils of a city. He died as the result of an injury in a New York subway. Mr. Mills pursued wild animals for the purpose of study, not to kill them.

Government Officials Indicted For Fraud

Washington, Jan. 4.—Conspiracy indictments recently returned by the special war frauds grand jury, involving former prominent government officials, in the awarding of more than 500 construction contracts, is causing much uneasiness in all parts of the country and especially in California. Several of the indicted served on the emergency construction committee of the war department as "dollar-a-year" men.

It is charged that between mid-November and July 1st, 1919, the alleged conspirators caused contracts in excess of $80,000,000 to be let, and of this amount the contractors they selected are charged with having grafted $11,000,000.

The indictment covers numerous typewritten pages.

Press Association to Meet Jan. 14

The Contra Costa County Press association will meet in Pittsburg, January 14, at Hotel Los Medanos. A number of important matters of interest to the country publisher will receive attention at the meeting, the two leading subjects being "The County Purchasing Agent" and "The Exploiting Advertising Agency." There will no doubt be a full representation of the entire county publishers present.

Richmond Police Are Ready For "Rough Stuff"

Police Chief Wood says he hopes there will be no occasion to use them, but he has equipped the department with the sawed-off article for self-protection and enforcing the law. It is the abbreviated shotgun, which spatters buckshot and is a dangerous weapon for crooks to go against. Chief Wood and his men will take no chances, and "forewarned is forearmed" with him.

The slogan is: "Enforce the law," orders from President Harding. The bootlegger says "it can't be done." The law-abiding vs. the law-breakers.

No Screens Allowed in San Leandro

San Leandro, Jan. 5.—An ordinance calling for installation of clear glass fronts and the elimination of booths and partitions in local soft drink parlors, was introduced at a meeting of the city board of trustees here Tuesday night. This ordinance if adopted, will make it hard for the bootleggers and blind-pigs, who have easy going behind screens and various kinds of camouflage used to obstruct the view, the same as in saloon days.

The Queer Little Feeling

By LILY WANDEL

(© 1932, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Maisie Rawley looked speculatively at Dick and shook her head. The eyes that looked at him from under the spangle fringe of her big black hat, set at an exaggerated angle on her tightly curled bobbed hair, were tired. Little lines were beginning to show at the edges.

"Dick, old boy, you're a bum actor; more out of work than in, you'll admit, and Maisie Rawley isn't going to get married to you on the road, believe me! I'm tired of this." She looked at the cheap furnishings of the shabby boarding-house parlor. "I'm dog-gone tired of cheap places, cheap clothes, cheap restaurants and cheap shows! And I'm not going to get married to continue that line."

"Aw, Maisie, we may have some luck. I'm trying to get on that vaudeville circuit. Now, couldn't we do an act together and—"

"Nix. When I marry, my husband is going to support me. I'm tired of this life."

"All right, Maisie. I'll get an act alone and—"

"Oh, cut it out, Dick, and come down to earth! You've never been able to get on a circuit—been trying for the last fifteen years, too." She began to powder an already whitened nose, sending little clouds of dust over her cheap satin skirt.

"Maisie," there was tenderness mixed with humor in Dick Burns' voice, "ain't we in the same boat, old girl? You're tired of 'five and ten' cosmetics and I'm sick of trimming my cuffs and pasting adhesive plaster on the shiny seams of this checked suit. Maisie, let's break away!" He looked at her breathlessly.

Maisie calmly slipped the powder pad in the V of her dress and shook her skirt. "Dick," she answered gently, "that would be plain suicide."

"You're forty and I'm almost thirty. You can't teach an old dog new tricks. You'll go on this way Dick, working now and then, borrowing a little, starving a little. It would be the same with me, Dick, if I joined forces with you. My dancing isn't much, and in a few years I'll be faded, living as I do. Nourishment and care preserve a woman's beauty, not hash and cheap hotel rooms, three in a bed, catching early trains in drizzling rains. I'll be frank, Dick. I want to marry well. I want a little comfort and good food, and I think I see a chance of getting it."

Dick got slowly to his feet. "I don't blame you." He made an effort to speak joyfully. "Here's good luck to you. I wish you the best."

When he had gone Maisie's throat felt queer and she hastily dabbed at her eyes with a pink cotton handkerchief to save her complexion from the tears that were about to fall.

"Miss Rawley!" Mrs. Snyder put in a frowny head. "Mail carrier has a registered letter for you."

A few hours later Maisie sat in the train, a bulging old suitcase at her feet, a trembling, wondering smile on her crumpled lips. "I think I'd better plumb myself to make sure—after all it might be a dream. Gee, what a blessing I didn't accept Dick Burns! Imagine being engaged to him, that poor hambone!" She snickered a little to herself in sheer joy. "Now I don't even have to marry anyone if I don't want to; maybe I will, though, some day. I'll marry for love. I'll meet some man at a country club. One of the first things I'll do will be to join a smart country club. I'll buy a sporty roadster and I'll have a saddle horse."

Maisie fairly hugged herself. "And that Uncle Timothy Rawley—course, I knew he was as rich as the dickens, but I thought he'd live to be ninety, and here I am, Maisie Rawley, ex-chorus girl, sole heir of all his real and personal estate! I can hardly believe it! I can just faintly remember that big country place he had. I was always so sorry that my dad had quarreled with him. I thought it would be so nice to visit there. And now I own it! I wish I had had the money to fix myself up a little better. What'll the servants think? Oh, well, I'll be getting all the clothes I want in a few days!" Thus Maisie's thoughts and plans spun along as the train flew past fields and hills.

At last they pulled in at Hillsboro, a tiny dusty town that Maisie faintly remembered leaving with her parents when she was a child. Hurriedly she inquired her way to the office of the attorneys "Briggs & Brill" and hastened down Main street with her heavy suitcase. Her eyes were shining, her lips parted; she scarcely noticed the weight of her burden.

Mr. Brill proved to be a thin-lipped, sour-faced old man and Mr. Briggs a hangdog, fat-stomached man and the couple of clerks, disinterested, cold-eyed. Maisie felt somewhat chilled; she was sure Mr. Briggs resented her presence and that Mr. Brill did not approve of her spangled hat nor her complexion. She had expected a different reception; it was a little disappointing. There was a "Sign here, please," and then, "That is all." Maisie, confused, gazed helplessly about.

"Could you call a taxi—or a hack to drive me out?" she stammered.

Old Brill said to one of the clerks: "Call Jenkins; he'll be your neighbor and he'll take you out for fifty cents."

Still in a daze Maisie stepped into a moldy old buggy beside an over-alled, wrinkled-faced farmer, but at least he smiled in a friendly way.

"Wait, wait, so you be old Hawley's niece, eh? Going to live on his place?" Maisie nodded. "And he that his bank book you're clutching?"

Maisie hastily looked at what old Brill had put in her hand.

The old farmer chuckled and slapped the reins on the white nag's back. Maisie, sitting beside him, uncomfortable, confused, wondered why he kept chuckling.

"Wall, reining in his horse before a broken gate that led to a weedy garden and a tiny, dilapidated cottage, 'here we are!'"

"Is this where you live?" asked Maisie, making no move to get out.

"No, I live right beyond that hill. This is your uncle's place." Climbing out he deposited Maisie's suitcase on the ground. "Now, jump! There! Wall, good-night, wish you luck in your new house! If you want anything go to the top of that there hill and holler. We'll hear you. Your uncle wasn't a bad sort," he called back, "if he hadn't drunk himself to death. And they say he was a rich man at one time, too."

When he was out of sight Maisie just slipped to the ground and sat on her suitcase, too stunned, too sick to even cry out her cruel disappointment.

A few hours later she managed to start a fire in the rusty little kitchen stove, then lighted a lamp and found some tea and crackers. From her suitcase she pulled a pad and pencil.

"I'm glad," said Maisie, to herself, "that I never said a word to anybody about this inheritance." Then she began to write her letter.

"And if you'll come, Dick, we'll get married and live right here! It isn't much of a place, but it's something to start on and it has possibilities. There's a few hundred dollars in the bank and I think we'll buy some chickens and ducks and maybe a cow! I want to tell you something, Dick—you and I will never amount to much on the stage and I'm so heartily sick of tawdry finery and make-up that the thought of a percale bungalow apron and a clean washed-face seems like heaven to me. And as I look around this little kitchen (it's going to get an awful scrubbing first thing in the morning) a queer little feeling comes over me. I don't know what it is, Dick, but I want you to share it with me. It's sort of a feeling of content, Dick, knowing this little place is really my own, and I guess, maybe, I'd call it the home-feeling."

INSANE OVER PASSION PLAY

Tragedy That Not Infrequently Over-

takes Men and Women of Town of Oberammergau.

There is no art without passion, and man must know passion, suffer under it, or attain it imaginatively, to put it into art.

There must be passion to spare in Oberammergau—a quiet, deep undercurrent of it running through the entire life of any likely candidate for a principal role. Not only passion, but tragedy, culminates in each decade's election. It is decorously held in hand by the respect for tradition and by the continental reverence for elders assembled in committee.

Each election is not only a clash between youth and age; the years between signify that a favored candidate for the role of Christus, who has approached the age of thirty, missing election, misses every chance to play the part; for at the next voting, he is opposed not only by his own former defeat, but in his turn, by youth.

I had an inkling of the devastating disappointment of such defeat when I met the wood carver, Aloysius Lang, the understudy to Anton Lang and his most formidable rival. He is twenty-six, athletic, and almost the handsomest man I have ever seen. He will play the role of Nicodemus, and, barring accident, never that of Christus.

Behind the performance of the Passion play there is all-pervading preparatory passion to spare. Men and women have gone insane over their roles; only "unblemished women" being permitted to act, girls have deferred their marriage for years, on the hint that they might be chosen for one of the Marys; and at least one Judas sought to hang himself.

Comopolitan City.

There is a famous miraculous shrine of the Virgin above the Porta Aetna in Vilna, capital of the Lithuanian republic, beneath which kneel pilgrims who come there from places hundreds of miles distant. In their multi-colored dresses and jackets the men and women afford the strangest schemes of color. At a stone's throw from the shrine a Mohammedan mosque, with its low twin towers, makes one think of Mecca. Within sight of the mosque and the shrine thrive several very ancient Jewish synagogues and Talmudical schools, which were, and still are, the seat of Hebrew culture in Europe.

There is a Russian quarter, a Polish quarter, and a Jewish quarter in Vilna, and even the old Tartars still retain most of their characteristics. Most of the people of the different nationalities wear their national costumes.

No "Blind Spots" on This New Plane of the Navy

This photograph shows a workman demonstrating the starting crank which makes unnecessary the dangerous operation of spinning the propeller on the navy's first all-metal flying machine, just completed and tested at Martin field, Cleveland, O. The machine is of necessity a monoplane to meet the navy requirements for observation purposes, and has no "blind spots." At no angle could an enemy plane approach without being observed by two members of the crew of three.

Menace of Auto Speeders Grows

Various Punishments Meted Out to Stop Steadily Mounting Toll of Victims.

JAIL SENTENCES EFFECTIVE

Digest of Reports From Middle Western States Shows Methods Being Employed to Check Evil—Fines $2 Per Mile.

What do you think ought to be done to stop the slaughter by auto speeders?

Chicago.—Heavier fines, jail sentences and trips through morgues and hospitals to view the dead and injured victims of reckless automobilists are becoming effective in many parts of the Middle West to curb the steadily mounting toll of auto victims, a digest from the report of several states shows.

Fines alone, the reports indicate, are not proving effective. In Chicago and Cook county, despite increasingly heavy fines, the death toll in automobile accidents for the fiscal year ending November 30 was 736 lives, as compared with 600 last year and 542 the year before. There were 75 automobile deaths in November of this year.

In Louisville, where 41 persons were killed by automobiles in the first eleven months of the year, fines have also failed, officials say. One police judge there imposes fines of $2 for each mile per hour on speeders, and adds jail sentences if the prisoner was intoxicated.

A successful campaign was launched at Detroit more than a year ago, when Judge Charles L. Bartlett began sending speeders to jail for terms of one to fifteen days. Among those sentenced was John Duval Dodge, wealthy young man, who served five days.

Recently speeding returned to Detroit and Judge Bartlett began conducting offenders through the morgues and hospitals to see the results of speeding. Arrests the week after the trips started dropped from 76 to 25.

Revokes Driver's License.

In Cincinnati jail sentences have been invoked and in some cases driver's licenses revoked.

Cleveland, with 116 deaths and 2,336 injuries in traffic accidents up to the middle of November, is employing workhouse sentences and morgue and hospital visits, as well as fines. Six speeders were sentenced to attend the funeral of a four-year-old victim of a speeder.

City Law Director Lambros proposes the speed of automobiles passing schools, playgrounds and churches be limited to ten miles an hour; that judges be authorized to revoke speeders' licenses; a uniform signal system for autoists stopping, turning or backing; and that no one under eighteen years of age be permitted to drive in cities or under sixteen years of age on any road.

In Des Moines Police Chief John Hammond has ordered intoxicated drivers held without bail, while judges are adding jail sentences in many cases to heavy fines.

Judge George E. Mix of St. Louis, who assesses fines as high as $300, has added a traffic law school to his court. Speeders who admit they know the traffic ordinances draw heavy fines. Those who do not are required to sit down between two policemen and study it. When they can recite the entire law to the judge they get a lighter fine.

In Indiana, the secretary of state has revoked autoists' licenses on recommendations of courts, and has promised to continue his co-operation. Judge Delbert Wilmet of the Indianapolis court has added jail sentences to fines of third convictions.

Imposes $25 Fines.

Kansas City has had occasional heavy fines on jail sentences, but no continued campaign against speeders. Police take license numbers of traffic law violators and on the third violation a fine of $25 is imposed.

Judge W. F. Wappick of Omaha takes groups of speeders to hospitals.

ARID AREAS ARE BEING RECLAIMED

Government Bureau Adds 1,675,000 Acres in 20 Years.

Annual Report Gives Result of Twenty Years of Operation of Reclamation Act—Government Investment $135,000,000.

Washington.—A 20-year review of government reclamation work is contained in the annual report for the fiscal year ended last June of Director Arthur P. Davis of the United States reclamation service of the Department of the Interior, as the 17th day of June, 1922, marked the completion of 20 years of operation of the national reclamation act.

The investment of the government during this period has been in round numbers $135,000,000, which has accomplished the construction of works by which about 1,675,000 acres of former arid land in the West has been furnished with a complete water supply and about 1,100,000 additional acres in private projects has received a supplemental supply. On government projects the area comprises 31,462 farms, at an average area per farm of about fifty-three acres, supplying more than 20,000 families.

With the investment mentioned the service has excavated more than 200,000,000 cubic yards of earth and rock, of which about 14,000,000 cubic yards have been placed in dams. Canals aggregating more than 13,000 miles have been built, including 27 miles of tunnels and 185 miles of flumes. Structures of all kinds and sizes, to the number of 110,000, have been erected in connection with the work.

Some of the larger projects constructed are the Roosevelt dam in Arizona, which is 200 feet high; the Arrowrock dam in Idaho, 349 feet high; Elephant Butte dam in New Mexico, 306 feet high, and the Pathfinder and Shoshone dam in Wyoming, 218 and 328 feet high, respectively.

Reclamation work also included the erection of many other dams, canals and tunnels, flumes, drains, power plants, transmitters, and telephone lines, roads, railroads, pumping plants and a variety of other classes of incidental work.

From an agricultural standpoint, the report said, the reclamation service has added another state to the Union, equal in value of its agricultural products to that of the state of West Virginia or the combined values of the crops of Vermont and Connecticut.

The value of crops raised on farms on government projects in 1921 amounted to $40,620,500, exclusive of about $45,000,000 additional raised on private projects which were furnished water from works erected by the service.

This road does not wait for calls to arrive, but keeps all plows busy during a snowstorm.

Railroad men declare that the delay occasioned by snowstorms on main lines has become negligible, except in severe weather and terrific storms, but admit more work is necessary on the branch lines because of the inaccessibility of the plows. Some railroad officials are inclined to believe that the winters in the Northwest have been milder of recent years, while others declared the use of modern equipment has made it seem the weather had less effect on the railroads.

Adrift With Humor

SO SENSITIVE ABOUT IT

"Is Mrs. Peckton much cast down since she was defeated in her race for congress?"

"So much so," replied Mr. Peckton, "that I don't believe I'll ever take her on another visit to Washington."

"Why not?"

"And where sight of those legislative halls she so confidently expected to adorn she'd burst into tears."

Some Reasons.

Mr. Peckton—You're 12 pounds under weight. Why did you buy that book on "How to Reduce?"

His Wife—Well, I might get fat and then it would come in handy and then I might build up by doing just the opposite from what the book says. Besides it was marked down to half price. And—Oh, you mind your own business.

Free-and-Easy Railroad.

"How far are we from Juniper Junction, conductor?"

"About 40 miles, ma'am."

"And when are we due to get there?"

"Oh, in about two hours, ma'am. If the engine holds out. But even if we don't get there in three hours, Juniper Junction is the kind of town that is willing to wait."

Not Foolish.

Meredith—I think Brown was foolish in spending all that money on a wireless outfit just because his wife wanted to listen to the free air concerts.

Webster—Foolish, indeed! He says the extra hours of quiet he gets every evening now are worth ten times the price he paid.

Wedding Note.

"Not long ago," says a metropolitan newspaper man, "I ran across a country paper which contained this paragraph in regard to a local wedding: 'The bride wore a lizard-green silk on whose cheek blossomed the first of dawning womanhood.'"

OVER-DEVELOPMENT

"Don't you think that fishing is good exercise?"

"Yes, for the imagination."

Can Sleep Now.

Our friend for life is Abram Shuster—His sliver killed Our neighbor's rooster.

A Monotonous Life.

"I presume time passes very slowly in prison, doesn't it, my good man?"

"Yes, ma'am. And the visiting hours when we have to answer everybody's questions are especially monotonous."

The Old Lady Again.

Caller—I am glad your niece is getting along so well with her studies. Do you think she will get on the merit roll?

Mrs. Blydenbury—Oh, undoubtedly. Her teacher says her work is so meretricious.

Hardly.

"If you will allow me to advise you, my boy, I wouldn't propose."

"Why not?"

"She isn't pretty."

"She has an adorable back."

"Still, you don't want that turned on you all your married life."

An Unimportant Detail.

"The teacher says I will soon speak French as well as I speak English."

"But you mispronounce many words."

"Oh, that's nothing. I mispronounce a lot of English words, too."

A Hat On.

Miss Antiqu—This is a corrupt age. Miss Keen—Well, dear, you should know, being in a position to compare it with previous ages.

The Last Resort.

"Is that all you've got for me and you so much in arrears?" growled the landlord.

"Gwan now an' be satisfied!" snapped the woman with the mop. "Yes, wouldn't have got that only one-eyed man has been an' sold the back door."

Question.

"What are these dehydrated fruits?"

"They have all the water taken out."

"Will the process ever be perfected?"

Merchant Now Eats Anything on Table

"By the help of Tanlac I have overcome a case of nervous indigestion I had suffered from for ten or twelve years," is the emphatic statement of Norman W. Brown, well-known wall paper and paint dealer, of 213 N. Cedar St., Charlotte, N. C.

"My stomach was always out of fix and everything disagreed with me. I was troubled with heartburn and distress, and at times there was a pressure of gas around my heart that almost cut off my breath."

"Since taking Tanlac my digestion is fine. My appetite is a wonder and I eat just anything I want. In fact, my stomach acts and feels just like a new one and my nerves are as steady as a die. To put it all in a few words, I am just the same as a new man. It's a pleasure for me to tell my friends about Tanlac."

Two flappers were looking at the window display. They paused before the figure of a woman, dressed in a gown that dated back half a century. After inspecting it closely one of them was moved to speech. Said she:

"Say, kid, it's no wonder girls was reserved in those days. Why, if a fellow would rough-house a girl in them kinda clothes she'd bust!"

THE SANDMAN STORY

FOX BROTHERS' TRICK

IT WAS a long way around the pond and a long way across, so which way he went it meant a long walk. Mr. Fox, and he was in a hurry to get to the farm on the hill on the other side of the pond.

"If I could only slide across," thought he, "and I could, for I have an aid-sled. If only I had some one to push me and give me a good start. Coming home I could take my time."

The more he thought the better it seemed to him, and so Mr. Fox trotted off to Mr. Coon's house to ask him to push the sled.

Mr. Fox Had Met the Little Fox Brothers.

If Mr. Fox had not been unkind to little Reddy Fox and his brother Ray he would very likely have had a long slide across the pond and arrived early at the farm.

But Mr. Fox had met the little Fox brothers one morning very early when they had been out hunting and taken from them a fat chicken which they were carrying home for breakfast. which was very wrong as well as unkind, because the strong should never take advantage of the weak.

The little brother Foxes did not forget this, and when Mr. Fox called on Mr. Coon to ask his help the little Fox brothers happened to be passing and heard what he said.

All the way home they were thinking what they could do to plague Mr. Fox and spoil his trip across the pond that night, and before it was time for Mr. Coon to be at the pine tree by the pond the Fox brothers had thought of a plan to pay Mr. Fox for taking their chicken.

It was not a moonlight night, and so when Mr. Fox and Mr. Coon met they did not see any one behind the tall bushes and rocks by the tree.

Mr. Fox was leaning against the rock, with his back to the bushes, and when he felt something on his back he looked around quickly, but the wind was blowing, away the bushes and he thought that was what he felt, but it wasn't; it was something far different.

"Now, you understand, you are to place your paws against my back as I sit on the sled," said Mr. Fox to Mr. Coon; "push hard, and away I will go across the frozen pond, and when I come back I will give you a good breakfast to pay you for helping me."

Mr. Coon said he understood perfectly, and Mr. Fox took his seat on the sled. "Now, when I say three," said Mr. Fox, "run a step or two with your paws pushing on my back. One, two, three!"

But instead of skimming across the pond on the sled, the sled went skimming, and Mr. Fox sat on the ground, with Mr. Coon on his stomach behind him, his paws still fast to Mr. Fox's back.

"What do you mean by pulling me off that sled?" asked Mr. Fox, very angry. "Let go of me! You are pulling me over."

Mr. Coon tried to get up, but every time he moved he pulled Mr. Fox over backward, and soon they were scrambling and kicking like two jumpingjacks, while the little Fox brothers, with a paw over their mouths, ran as fast as they could until they were out of the hearing of Mr. Fox and Mr. Coon. Then they rolled over, laughing, on the ground at the funny sight they had left by the pond.

"That glue was very clinging stuff," said Reddy, sitting up on the ground. "Mr. Fox is a very smart fellow, but he was fooled when I put that glue on his back. He thought it was the wind blowing the bushes."

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

ALICE

ALICE, curiously enough, is a man's name, not a woman's. Originally it was given to the sons of the family, and is, without doubt, derived from the Anglo-Saxon Adelfig, of which the feminine form was Adelgisa. It means noble, in both its masculine and feminine forms.

It is clear that Alice represents Adelfig and not Adelgisa, and that the proper feminine form would be Alisa. Some believe that Eliza, generally thought to be a derivative of Elizabeth, is this missing form. For proof of Alisa as the representative of Adelfig, the Liber Vitae of Durham records the changes in Adelgisa from the first noble lady of that name who laid her gifts upon the altar. By contraction it became first Adelisa, Adaliza, and Alisa.

Alisa is still given to daughters of noble families in Europe. Adalitz, Adils and finally Alis, are other contractions. Alisa is a derivation which represents an effort at euphony lacking in Alisa, but Alisa is not so derived as is popularly supposed, but has a completely different origin.

Alise is purely English with a slight Teutonic flavor, since another explanation of its origin is that the name is derived from the feminine Adelbert or Adelchen, signifying "daughter" in Frankland. Alis or Alisa in Lombardy was naturalized in England when Alis la Belle married Henry I.

Alexandrite is the tsar's name of Alice. It is found in the emerald mines of Russia and its splendid green, which changes pulsatingly to columbine red, makes it representative of the Russian national colors and therefore honored as a national stone. The Russians believe that it brings great fortune. It denotes hope and, when dreamed of, indicates much to look forward to. Monday is Alice's lucky day and 7 her lucky number. Her flower is the white hawthorn, which means hope.

Alise has been traditionally surrounded by all the virtues and simplicity which man is supposed to desire in woman. Indeed, the name is poetically synonymous with "true blue." It has been immortalized in the old song, "Ben Bolt":

Oh, do you remember Sweet Alice, Ben Bolt,
Sweet Alice with hair so brown;
Who thrilled with delight when you gave her a smile,
And trembled with fear at your frown?

The Friendly Path

By WALTER I. ROBINSON

THE FUTURE

LEARN to stand on your own feet. A few make headway by depending on others, but the majority must hoe their own path. Unless one, therefore, has confidence in himself and is able to cause others to trust and believe in him as he deserves, he is not likely to make much headway and his pathway will in all probability, be hedged with thorny briars. Day after day, as he plods onward toward his uncertain goal, his life is likely to be disturbed and his happiness destroyed by the thorn pricks every time he halts to reflect on the best way to gain his desires.

In the social world introductions are necessary. Those who push themselves into the midst of a formal party unannounced could expect nothing else but icy stares and an unpleasant departure through a rear door. But in the world of business, industry and finance introductions are not essential to success. Those who bemoan their misfortunes in not being able to have some one of high standing help above them are themselves their own worst handicaps.

A vice president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, still actively managing a big manufacturing business, though he is up in the eighties, recently declared that he didn't consider introductions of much value to those seeking business or industrial success. He tells a story to illustrate his reason for confidence that big men trust others just as quickly without introductions as with them, providing those seeking recognition believe in themselves and have the proper sort of personality. He declared that when banks in his own city were too small to extend to his business sufficient credit, he went to New York, without introduction and, by stating his situation frankly, obtained the line of credit he required for his shops.

Greater frankness would lessen business worries today.

TO WIPE OUT TUBERCULOSIS

State of Washington Expected to Be First to Eliminate Bred Cattle Diseases.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Washington is expected to be the first of the 48 states to make definite plans to wipe out all bovine tuberculosis within its borders. In 20 of the 20 counties area eradication work has already been conducted in co-operation with the United States Department of Agriculture. The commissioner of agriculture and the state veterinarian have planned a state-wide program that will be presented to the legislature in January. The governor is understood to be in favor of the plan, and there is every reason to believe that sufficient money will be appropriated so that with the co-operation of the department on the present basis all the cattle in the state will be tested within a reasonable time.

The light infection of the cattle herds in the state and the fact that most of the cattle already have been tested make the outlook particularly promising. An indication of the low percentage of tuberculosis was found in Spokane county this summer. The veterinarian in charge tested 499 herds, containing 2,754 animals, and condemned only 4.

Ninety-five per cent of the purebred herds in Washington are already under supervision.

GATE MADE HANDY FOR HOGS

Permits Small Animals to Pass Through, but Horses and Cattle Are Kept Out.

I am sending diagram (D-181) and description of a gate which we have used with much success for about twenty years to allow hogs through but not cattle or horses, writes F. Noll of Kansas in the Prairie Farmer. This gate can be of any length or height desired, and as shown the vertical cleats are made long enough to catch on bottom board of fence to prevent pushing and breaking, but if wanted to work both ways the lower projections will have to be cut off. It will be better, however, to keep the gate hooked down, and when wanted for passing stock through, to raise gate up and hook it out of the way. We generally make such a gate out of 1 by 6 rough cypress and about 4 feet high, spacing cracks from bottom up 2 1/2, 2 1/2 and 5 inches.

HAVE MILK HOUSE SEPARATE

Room for Straining, Cooling and Storage Should Be Free From Dust and Bad Odors.

Every farm on which dairying is an important interest should have a milk house separated from the stable. At least there should be a milk room, which though it may be under the same roof, should not open into the stable. The milk should be promptly removed from the stable and carried to the milk room for straining, cooling and storage. This work should be done in an atmosphere free from dust, insects and noxious odors.

Farmers' Bulletin 1214 issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, gives plans and pictures of milk houses adapted to various conditions. Blue prints may be obtained from the department at Washington, D. C.

IMPORTANT FEEDS FOR SOW

Ration Supplied While Carrying Her Litter Must Contain Protein and Minerals.

The ration which the sow receives while she is carrying her litter must be plentifully supplied with protein and minerals. These important food materials not only affect the quality, but also the number of pigs which are farrowed.

Time to Wean Pigs. Pigs may be weaned when they are about eight weeks of age. When the pigs are two or three weeks old they begin to take an interest in the grain fed their mothers, and this should be encouraged.

Consideration for Animals. Be considerate of farm animals; it pays.

Save the Feed Bill. Put up the stock when cold rains come, and it will save you lots of feed.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

CHAMPION CHILDREN'S CAUSE

On Children's day during the recent Safety Week campaign in Greater New York, boy scouts directed traffic, gave demonstrations of first-aid and marched 7,000 strong in a mammoth children's parade. The scouts wore buttons containing the Safety Week slogan, "Don't Get Hurt!" and carried impressive mottoes emphasizing the need of caution, such as: "The A. B. C. of Safety is, Always Be Careful," "Better Be Alert Than a Cripple," "A Rush Minute and a Human Wreck," "Better Belated Than Mutilated," "Scouts Are Trained for Safety," "Be Prepared Is Our Motto."

At the foot of a monument erected in Central park to the memory of the 1,054 children of Greater New York whose lives were lost in 1921 through preventable accidents, the mayor decorated with a gold medal Scout Samuel Levine, who, because of his thrilling rescue of two boys under desperate circumstances had been selected as the boy scout of Greater New York who had performed the most meritorious act of life-saving. The medal was especially designed and was the gift of Judge Elbert G. Gary.

Because of the number of acts of heroism performed by scouts, the committee found it difficult to reach a decision. Among the outstanding cases were the rescue by individual scouts of a small girl, whose dress had caught afire while she was playing near a bonfire; of a small boy who fell from a dock into deep water; of a girl who had broken through ice while skating; of a young woman who had discarded her water-wings, and unable to swim, ventured too far out in the surf; and of a boy, not a scout who was being carried away by a swift current. The last mentioned rescue was performed by a scout who had sight in only one eye.

AN ENGLISH SCOUT LEADER

At the invitation of the American delegation at the recent international conference of scout officials at Paris, Capt. Francis Gidney of England, attended the national biennial conference of scout executives at Blue Ridge, North Carolina, in September.

Capt. Francis Gidney is one of the most prominent leaders of scouting in England. He has been a scoutmaster since the early days of the movement, and for the past three years has been camp chief of the well-known Gilwell Park training school for scout leaders, Chingford, Essex, England. Captain Gidney has placed in his camp many of the picturesque features of American Indian and cowboy life. He is an expert in lassoing and rope work of various kinds, and gives credit to our own Will Rogers for much of his knowledge. Captain Gidney brought with him an extensive exhibit of English scouting equipment and handiwork. He says: "The only continent on which I have not had the opportunity of studying scouting at first hand is Australia, and I am looking forward with keen interest to my visit to this country and to meeting the scout executives at their conference. It is a privilege which is myself personally, but by the whole scout movement in Great Britain. I do sincerely hope that it will prove a link in scouting operation between the two great countries."

HIKING HELPED

Although he had suffered when a child with infantile paralysis which left one leg in a weakened condition, Frank Bedson, seventeen-year-old Trenton scout, walked every mile of the 224 miles hiked by the Trenton scouts on their recent trip to Fort Tilden, Oregon. At the close of the trip Bedson said to Scout Executive Abriels: "I feel wonderfully improved. I don't believe anything else could have limbered me up as this hike has done."

AID COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

Scouts contributed assistance to the recent convention of the New England councils of the United Commercial Travelers at Springfield, Mass., by maintaining information and aid stations, by furnishing a bicycle safety first squad, a comfort squad, traffic guards and a life and drum corps, and by entering a float in the pageant of industry, a feature of the last day of the convention.

THE HEART OF SCOUTING

MAYOR HAS OWN TROOP

In Springfield, Mass., Troop No. 13 has both paid honor to and been honored by the city's chief executive, Mayor Edwin F. Leonard, who is one of the community's strongest supporters of the boy scout movement. Last February during twelfth anniversary week, his honor, as mayor, received the badge of honorary tenderfoot scout. Recently, as private citizen, he was decorated with a veteran pin for his services. Troop No. 13 is "The Mayor's Own."

Homes Versus Revolution

This country has a great deal of radical material that would be swept along in any wave of revolution that might come along.

There is one element that forever blocks the danger of movements of this character—the small home and land owners are in the majority.

He who owns his home and sits under his own vine and fig tree is owned by the home influences that are against revolutions.

The millions of little homes, bungalows, gardens and acreage tracts and owners of suburban improvements are the safeguard of the nation.

The man who owns a little home, or fruit tract or small farm is owned by that property and is not an easy mark for the red flag.

Legislators, bankers, employers of labor and government generally should do all possible to make it easy to own and keep homes.

U. S. Senator King of Utah last September introduced in the senate a bill making speculation in coal in interstate commerce a penitentiary offense. King claimed that the high price of coal was due to speculation by brokers. King's bill must have been sidetracked, as the coal barons are still doing business at the old stands.

When an advertising agency becomes so emboldened and puffed up that it attempts to shape the policy of the country publisher, fix his advertising rates and discount his moral and financial standing in the publisher's home town and community, it is time for the country press to show its teeth and revolt—and organize.

CONSTANTLY ADDING COLORS

Dyers, Up to a Recent Date, Have Developed Some Fourteen Hundred Varying Shades.

"How many colors do you suppose there are?" a manufacturer of woolsens asked the reporter.

"Three primaries, red, yellow and blue, and three secondaries, orange, green and purple," replied the reporter promptly. "Or, if you want the colors of the spectrum, red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet."

But he was away off, as this authority soon showed. In the first installment of the "color index" of the Society of Dyers and Colorists at Bradford, England, about 1,400 colors are displayed, and there were 1,000 colors given in the German work on the same subject in its edition of 1914. To the trained eye, which acquires a perception of gradations that would make the most refined musical ear seem elementary by comparison, no two of these colors are alike. The dyes are those of dye-makers all over the world, including 29 in the United States and 32 each in Great Britain and Germany.—Wall Street Journal.

THE ELECTRON

A strikingly apt description of that inconceivably minute particle, the electron, which within late years has dethroned the atom as the ultimate component of matter, was given not long ago by an eminent scientist. Its behavior, he stated, is that of an atom of negative electricity pure and simple. Its form is spherical and not spheroidal. Its size is probably less than one ten-millionth of an inch. When revolving briskly enough in an orbit within the atom it gives us colored light of highest purity. When violently jostling irregularly about, it gives us white light. Without it all light would be impossible.
